

Abstract Of The Disclosure

5 A set of peripheral chips for realizing hardware functions of a control device has at least two electronic units, which allow partitioning for the purpose of providing at least one basic functionality for a control device. This first and/or second electronic unit(s) may typically be configured as application-specific electronic switching circuit (ASIC).